

Dean of the Graduate School
London College of Fashion, John Princes Street
c£78,000

University of the Arts London is a vibrant world centre for innovation, drawing together six Colleges with international reputations in art, design, fashion, communication and performing arts.

Forming part of the University, the London College of Fashion is recognised as one of the foremost centres of fashion education in the world. This is your chance to build on that reputation, providing academic, strategic and operational leadership for the Graduate School – both our postgraduate portfolio and our research team activities. You will be a key member of the College Executive Management Team, an open and participative forum, which will allow you to contribute to the strategic development and operation of the College and University as a whole. Taking on responsibility for the ongoing promotion and strategic development of our curriculum and research offer, as well as the recruitment of a growing research student population, you will foster a research culture across the College, positively promoting an excellent student experience at the forefront of curriculum development.

To take on an influential role such as this you will need a substantial proven record of teaching, research or professional practice in one or more of our specialist areas of postgraduate study, together with considerable experience of managing people and resources, preferably in higher education. Recognised as an authority in your field, with a postgraduate qualification in a creative industries-related area you should have a demonstrable knowledge of one or more fields of contemporary fashion-related research, and the mechanisms for managing and funding researchers. Along with this, you should have an impressive track record of developing and supervising research and commercial projects. A naturally talented team leader, you will be informed about key issues, and above all, you will be a talented influencer and networker, who can both support others to excel, and create the essential connections that will help us build on our global reputation.
